1 ROBERT D. FRAM (Bar No. 126750) rfram@cov.com 2 SAMUEL F. ERNST (Bar No. 223963) sernst@cov.com 3 COVINGTON & BURLING LLP One Front Street 4 San Francisco, CA 94111-5356 Telephone: (415) 591-6000 5 Facsimile: (415) 591-6091 6 Attorneys for Plaintiffs Apple Inc. and Apple Sales International 7 8 9 10 UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT 11 SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA 12 13 APPLE INC. and APPLE SALES Civil Case No.: 3:12cv00355 DMS (BLM) 14 INTERNATIONAL, 15 Plaintiffs, SECOND AMENDED COMPLAINT 16 v. MOTOROLA MOBILITY LLC, 17 Defendant. 18 19 20 21 PUBLIC/REDACTED VERSION 22 23 24 25 26 27 28

Case 3:12-cv-00355-GPC-BLM Document 69 Filed 08/03/12 Page 1 of 23

SF: 169547-3

1 COMPLAINT 2 Plaintiffs Apple Inc. and Apple Sales International (collectively, "Apple"), for their 3 Second Amended Complaint against Motorola Mobility LLC ("Motorola"), allege and state as 4 follows: 5 PARTIES 6 1. Plaintiff Apple Inc. is a California corporation having its principal place of 7 business at 1 Infinite Loop, Cupertino, California, 95014. 8 2. Plaintiff Apple Sales International is an unlimited company organized under the 9 laws of the Republic of Ireland having its principal place of business at Hollyhill Industrial 10 Estate, Hollyhill, Cork, Republic of Ireland. 11 3. On information and belief, Motorola Mobility LLC, formerly Motorola Mobility, 12 Inc., is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Google Inc. organized under the laws of Delaware with its 13 principal place of business at 600 North U.S. Highway 45, Libertyville, Illinois 60048. 14 15 JURISDICTION AND VENUE 16 4. This action arises under Title 35 of the United States Code. The Court has subject 17 matter jurisdiction over these claims pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§ 1331, 1338(a), 1367, 2201, and 18 2202. This Court also has diversity jurisdiction over each of the claims under 28 U.S.C. § 19 1332(a) in that this is a civil action between diverse parties where the amount in controversy 20 exceeds the sum or value of $75,000. 21 5. This Court has personal jurisdiction over Motorola under California Code of Civil 22 Procedure § 410.10. 23 6. Venue is proper in this district under 28 U.S.C. §§ 1391(b) and (c) and pursuant to 24 25 26 27 28

2

22

23

24

25

26

27

28

7.

I. NATURE OF THE ACTION

This is a lawsuit asserting claims for anticipatory breach of contract by repudiation

_
3	and declaratory relief related to Motorola's license agreements with Qualcomm covering
4	Motorola's declared cellular standards-essential patents. Motorola entered into a license
5	agreement with Qualcomm, in which Motorola
6	. As a Qualcomm customer, Apple is a third-party beneficiary
7	of that contract. Motorola then openly repudiated its contract with Qualcomm by sending a letter
8	to Qualcomm on January 11, 2011, copying Apple, purporting to
9	. Motorola then breached its contract with Qualcomm by
10	suing Apple in Germany, claiming infringement of European Patent No. 1 010 336 ("the '336
11	patent"), the European equivalent patent to U.S. Patent No. 6,359,898 ("the '898 patent") based
12	on Apple's use of Qualcomm components in Apple's iPhone 4S product. Under Motorola's
13	contract with Qualcomm, Motorola's rights in the Qualcomm components sold to Apple were
14	exhausted. The Higher Regional Court of Karlsruhe in Germany has determined that Apple has
15	made a valid "Orange Book" offer for a license to the German patent rights. Under German law,
16	this means that Motorola cannot refuse Apple's offer and remain in compliance with German
17	antitrust law. Accordingly, given the requirements of German law and the ruling of the Higher
18	Regional Court of Karlsruhe, the question of liability is no longer an issue in Germany, although
19	the parties will continue to litigate the amount of damages Apple must pay Motorola for the past
20	infringement Motorola alleges and the amount of a FRAND license. ² Motorola, however, has
21

¹ The Orange Book defense is unique to German law. It refers to a procedure whereby a defendant accused of infringing a declared standards-essential patent can make an offer to license the patent. The plaintiff may not reject the offer where, as here, the offered terms are such that rejection would constitute a violation of Germany's antitrust laws. The royalty rate demanded by Motorola in Germany is not what Apple considers an appropriate FRAND royalty rate, and the amount of the royalty will continue to be litigated in Germany.

² The Higher Regional Court of Karlsruhe ruled that Motorola must accept Apple's license offer in Germany or be in violation of German antitrust law. On the basis that this ruling requires Motorola to grant Apple a license to the relevant patents in Germany, Apple submits this Second Amended Complaint, which expressly does not seek declaratory relief regarding Apple's right to use Qualcomm components in Germany, injunctive relief prohibiting Motorola from continuing to litigate its claims in Germany, or breach of contract remedies for Motorola's wrongful prosecution of infringement claims against Apple in Germany.

1 further repudiated its contract with Qualcomm by refusing to stipulate that it will not accuse 2 Apple of infringing its declared cellular-essential patents based on the use of Qualcomm 3 components in countries other than Germany. Motorola again repudiated its contract with 4 Qualcomm by stating in a brief in the German proceedings that it may seek to accuse the Apple 5 iPhone 4S of infringement in the United States. Accordingly, Apple brings this suit for 6 anticipatory breach of contract by repudiation, as well as for declaratory and injunctive relief, and 7 asks this Court to declare that Motorola's attempted termination of Apple's rights under the 8 Qualcomm-Motorola license agreement was ineffective and to enjoin Motorola from prosecuting 9 and enforcing claims against Apple based on Apple's use of Qualcomm chips anywhere in the 10 world outside of Germany in breach of that license agreement. 11 II. MOTOROLA'S LICENSE AGREEMENT WITH QUALCOMM 8. 12 Under a license agreement between Qualcomm and Motorola and amendments to 13 that agreement, Motorola has 14 15 9. Specifically, Qualcomm and Motorola are parties to a Patent License Agreement 16 that was originally entered into in 1990 ("1990 PLA"). On information and belief, this agreement 17

was assigned to Motorola Mobility, Inc. by Motorola, Inc. 10

18

19

20

21

22

23

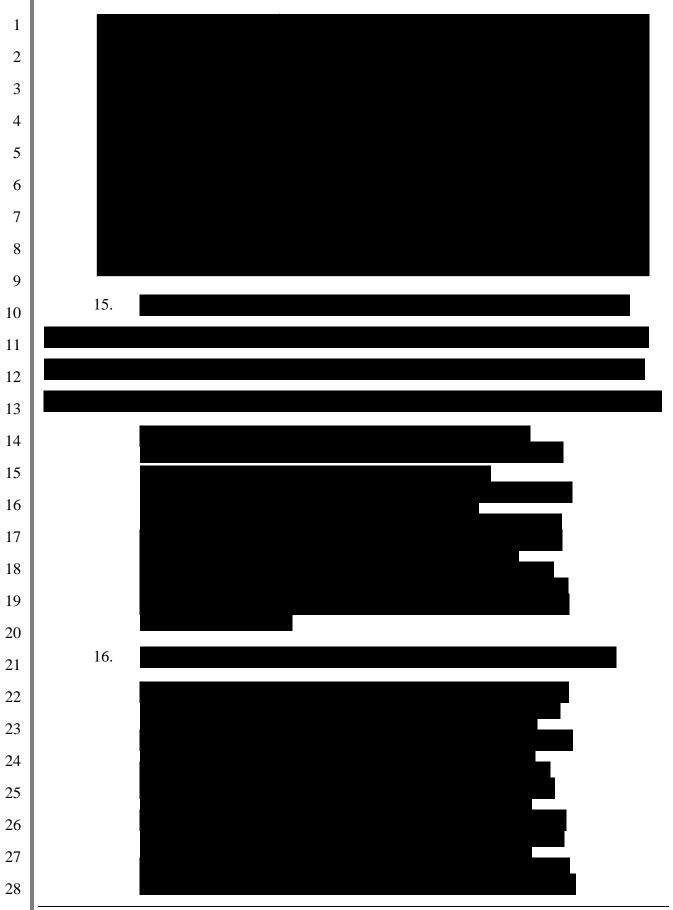

24

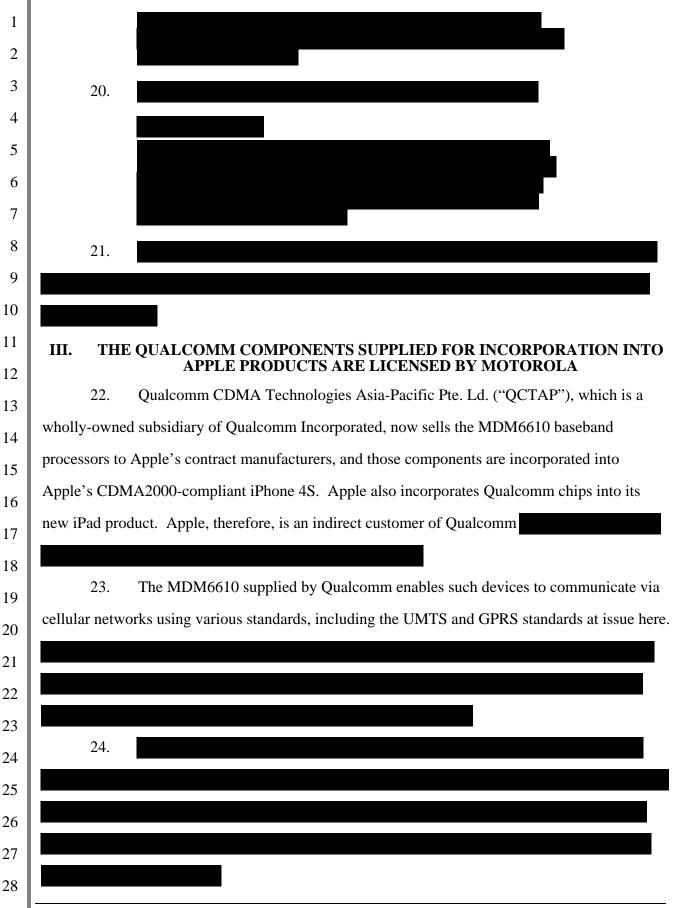

25

26

27

10.
11.
12.	·

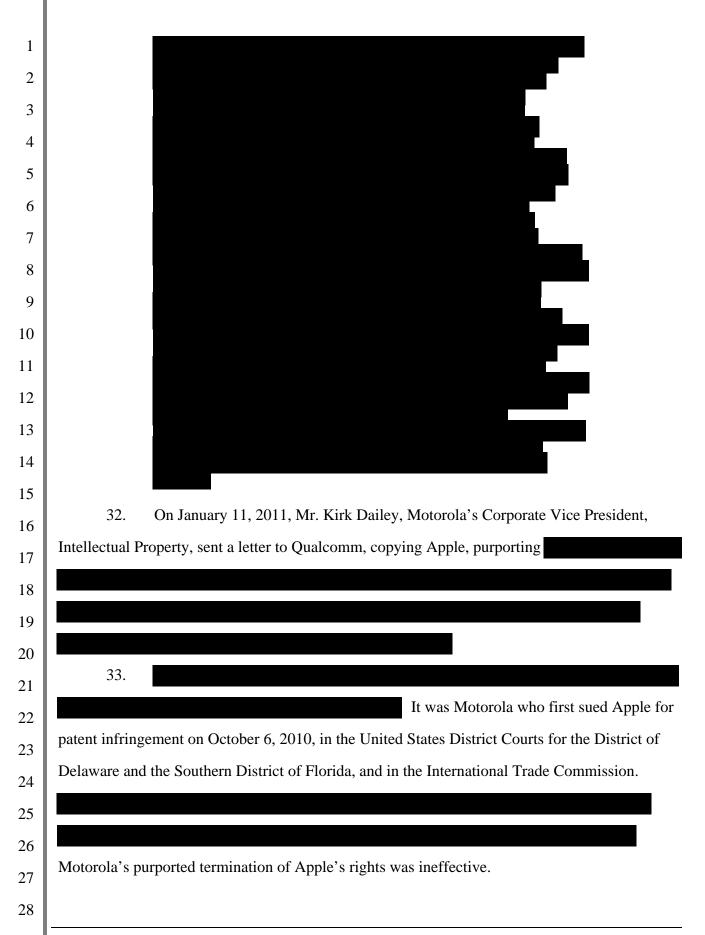

25.

MOTOROLA'S THREATS AND LITIGATION AGAINST APPLE ON DECLARED STANDARD ESSENTIAL PATENTS

A. Motorola's Breach of its FRAND Promise

- 26. Motorola has declared to the European Telecommunications Standards Institute ("ETSI") that the '898 patent is essential to practicing ETSI's GPRS standard. Motorola also committed to license its patent on fair, reasonable, and non-discriminatory ("FRAND") terms.
- 27. A promise to license under fair, reasonable, and nondiscriminatory terms is the quid pro quo that standards setting participants extend to the industry in return for the right to collaborate with competitors in creating a standard that has the power to block market access. Apple believes that parties who commit to license their standards essential patents on FRAND terms have obligations they cannot ignore, evade, or apply only prospectively after an abuse has occurred.
- 28. Apple's position on FRAND licensing is long standing. When Apple makes a promise to license its standards essential patents under FRAND terms, Apple will not waver. Apple will keep its commitment and, should it transfer any such patents to a third party, will take best efforts to ensure that the third party adheres to Apple's FRAND obligations. If parties are interested in licensing these patents, Apple will offer to make the patents available on FRAND terms, as long as those terms are reciprocal, and will do so without requiring others to license back to Apple anything more than their similarly held standards essential patents. Apple also commits not to seek an injunction or exclusion order on the basis of its standards essential patents that are subject to a FRAND licensing commitment. Despite owning scores of standards essential patents, Apple has never asserted a standard essential patent in litigation and, therefore—unlike some in the technology industry—has never used a patent subject to a FRAND commitment to deny market access to a rival.

1	29. Apple went a step further in November 2011 when it clarified its FRAND
2	commitment to ETSI on cellular standards essential patents. In its letter, Apple emphasized that
3	seeking injunctive relief is inconsistent with a FRAND licensing obligation and went on to
4	propose a reciprocal framework for calculating FRAND that emphasizes an appropriate royalty
5	rate and a common base as a way to bring meaning to a concept that has been too long abused.
6	30. Motorola, on the other hand, has pursued an aggressive international campaign of
7	litigation that flies in the face of its promise to license its cellular standards essential patents on
8	FRAND terms.
9	B. Motorola's Wrongful Repudiation of its Contract with Qualcomm
10	31.
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19
20
21
2223
24
25
26
27

1	34.
2
3
4
5
6	C. The German Proceedings
7	35. On April 1, 2011, Motorola Mobility, Inc. sued Apple Sales International in case
8	number 7 O 122/11 in the District Court of Mannheim in the Federal Republic of Germany ("the
9	ASI Mannheim Action") alleging, among other things, that Apple Sales International infringes
10	the '336 patent.
11	36. Motorola alleges in the ASI Mannheim Action that it is not possible to practice the
12	European Telecommunications Standards Institute's ("ETSI's") GPRS standard, a cellular
13	standard, without infringing the '336 patent—in other words, that the '336 patent is essential to
14	that standard. Motorola contends that certain Apple mobile communications devices infringe the
15	'336 patent because they are compliant with the GPRS standard.
16	37. Motorola did not name the Apple iPhone 4S as an accused product in its complaint
17	in the ASI Mannheim Action. The iPhone 4S was not on sale in Germany at the time that
18	Motorola filed its complaint.
19	38. On December 9, 2011, the District Court of Mannheim ordered Apple Sales
20	International to cease and desist selling products that it found infringe the '336 patent. The
21	District Court also ordered Apple Sales International to perform an accounting and pay the costs
22	of the lawsuit, and to pay damages, the amount of which are to be determined.
23	39. Apple Sales International immediately appealed the order of the Mannheim
24	District Court to the Higher Regional Court of Karlsruhe. Apple Sales International also
25	immediately filed a Request for Suspension of the Mannheim District Court's Order.
26	40. In response, Motorola for the first time in a brief submitted to the Higher Regional
27	Court of Karlsruhe on January 12, 2012, made the assertion that Apple's iPhone 4S was subject to essential patents from Motorola for the purpose of selling products in Germany. In light of
I

1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19
20
21
22
23
24
25
26

Motorola's obligation to license these patents on FRAND terms, the Higher Regional Court of Karlsruhe has determined that Motorola must accept Apple's licensing terms or be in violation of German antitrust law. Accordingly, given the requirements of German law and the ruling of the Higher Regional Court of Karlsruhe, the question of liability is no longer an issue in Germany, although the parties will continue to litigate the amount of damages Apple must pay Motorola for the past infringement Motorola alleges and the amount of a FRAND license.

D. Motorola's Threats to Sue Apple for Infringement Outside of Germany

- 49. In Apple Inc. v. Motorola, Inc., et al. case number 1:11-cv-08540 before the United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois, Motorola accused Apple of infringing the '898 patent. This case was filed on October 29, 2010 in the Western District of Wisconsin, case no. 3:10-cv-662, and was transferred to the Northern District of Illinois from that court on December 1, 2011.
- 50. Motorola did not accuse the Apple iPhone 4S or the new iPad products of infringing the '898 patent and has not accused Apple of patent infringement based on Apple's use of Qualcomm's MDM 6610 baseband chip or other Qualcomm components in the iPhone 4S, the new iPad, or other Apple products.
- 51. On February 27, 2012, Motorola and Apple entered into an agreement "not to accuse any additional or new products of infringement of any patents-in-suit (and not to seek an injunction in this case for any such additional or new products) that were not accused of infringement in the original expert disclosures in this case." Apple's iPhone 4S was not accused of infringement by Motorola in the expert disclosures in the Illinois case.
- 52. However, in this agreement "[b]oth parties retain all rights to file separate actions on any additional or new products and seek any relief (including injunctive relief) in any other action. This agreement only relates to adding products to case No. 1:11-cv-08540."
- 53. On June 22, 2012, the Illinois court entered final judgment, inter alia, dismissing Motorola's claim for infringement of the '898 patent. Motorola has appealed that decision to the Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit.

28

1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19
20
21
22
23
24
25
26

54. Moreover, on January 23, 2012, Motorola filed a brief in the Higher District Court of Karlsruhe in the Federal Republic of Germany indicating that it may seek to accuse the Apple iPhone 4S of infringement of the '898 patent in the United States. Motorola stated as follows:

Also the further assertions with regard to the iPhone 4S are inaccurate. There is no strategy in place not to challenge these products. The fact that the Plaintiff has not yet challenged the 4S in Wisconsin has tactical reasons of a procedural nature, which the Plaintiff naturally will not expose to the Defendant.

This constituted a further wrongful repudiation by Motorola of its contract with Qualcomm.

55. On March 27, 2012, counsel for Apple asked counsel for Motorola to enter into a stipulation not to sue Apple for infringement of its declared standards-essential patents in any forum outside of Germany. Motorola refused to enter into such a stipulation. This constituted a further wrongful repudiation by Motorola of its contract with Qualcomm.

IV. MOTOROLA'S ACTIONS THREATEN APPLE WITH IRREPARABLE HARM

- 56. Apple will incur irreparable harm if Motorola is not enjoined from initiating litigation outside of this Court and outside of Germany alleging that Apple infringes its patents by virtue of incorporating Qualcomm chips in breach of its license agreement with Qualcomm. This harm will include the loss of a volume of sales that cannot be quantified with specificity, as well as a loss of consumer goodwill, negative publicity, and damage to relationships with distributors and resellers, as well as with current owners of the iPhone 4S, the new iPad, and other Apple products.
- 57. Apple is likely to succeed on the merits of its breach of contract and declaratory judgment claims. First, Apple is likely to show that Motorola's threats of litigation and attempt to terminate Apple's rights under the Qualcomm-Motorola licenses is a wrongful anticipatory breach by repudiation of Motorola's contract with Qualcomm to which Apple is a third-party beneficiary. Second, Apple is likely to show that Motorola's attempted termination of Apple's rights under the Qualcomm-Motorola license was ineffective. Third, Apple is likely to establish that Motorola's patent rights in the Qualcomm MDM6610 chip are exhausted.

27

1	58. The public interest and balance of equities further favor the issuance of an
2	injunction. Motorola's continued threats to sue Apple for Apple's use of Qualcomm components
3	outside of this Court and outside of Germany frustrate the law and policy of the United States
4	with respect to patent license and patent exhaustion. The public interest as well as the balance of
5	harms favor Apple's request for an injunction.
6
7	COUNT ONE
8	(ANTICIPATORY BREACH OF CONTRACT TO WHICH APPLE IS A THIRD PARTY
9	BENEFICIARY)
10	59. Apple incorporates paragraphs 1-58 as if fully set forth herein.
11	60. As a Qualcomm customer, Apple is an intended third party beneficiary to the
12	Qualcomm-Motorola agreement wherein
13	Qualcommi-Motorola agreement wherein
14
15	61. Motorola wrongfully repudiated its contract with Qualcomm when, on January 11,
16	2011, Mr. Kirk Dailey, Motorola's Corporate Vice President, Intellectual Property, sent a letter to
17	Qualcomm, copying Apple, purporting
18	Quareonimi, copying rippie, parporting
19	62. Motorola was not entitled to terminate Apple's rights
20
21
22	It was Motorola who first sued Apple for patent
23	infringement on October 6, 2010, in the United States District Courts for the District of Delaware
24	and the Southern District of Florida, and in the International Trade Commission.
25
26	Motorola's
27	purported termination of Apple's rights was ineffective.
28

- 63. Motorola wrongfully repudiated its contract with Qualcomm again when it filed a brief in the Higher District Court of Karlsruhe in the Federal Republic of Germany indicating that it may seek to accuse the Apple iPhone 4S of infringement in the United States.
- 64. Motorola wrongfully repudiated its contract with Qualcomm again when it refused to enter into a stipulation not to sue Apple for infringement of its declared standards-essential patents in any forum outside of Germany.
- 65. As an intended third-party beneficiary of the agreement, Apple may bring suit for these wrongful anticipatory breaches of contract by repudiation.
- 66. Apple has incurred and will continue to incur harm as the result of Motorola's anticipatory breach of contract by repudiation. As Apple had expected to use the Qualcomm chips free of litigation costs, Apple's expectation damages are the cost of defending itself in any litigation against Motorola. Apple will also incur consequential damages, including loss of profits, loss of customers, loss of goodwill and product image, and uncertainty among customers and potential customers should any Court enjoin Apple from selling its products incorporating Qualcomm chips. Though the total amount of such damages cannot currently be quantified with specificity, Apple's total expectation and consequential damages exceed $75,000.

COUNT TWO

(DECLARATORY JUDGMENT THAT MOTOROLA'S ATTEMPT TO TERMINATE APPLE'S RIGHTS UNDER THE QUALCOMM LICENSE WAS INEFFECTIVE)

- 67. Apple incorporates paragraphs 1-66 as if fully set forth herein.
- 68. An actual and justiciable controversy exists between Apple and Motorola with respect to whether Motorola's attempt to terminate Apple's rights under the Qualcomm license agreement was effective. This is based, inter alia, on (1) Motorola's ineffective attempt to terminate Apple's right to use Qualcomm components; (2) Motorola's statements in German proceedings that "[t]here is no strategy in place not to challenge [the iPhone 4S]. The fact that the Plaintiff has not yet challenged the 4S in Wisconsin has tactical reasons of a procedural nature, which the Plaintiff naturally will not expose to the Defendant."; and (3) Motorola's refusal to

1	stipulate that it will not sue Apple for infringement based on Apple's use of the Qualcomm
2	components outside of Germany.
3	69. Absent a declaration that Motorola's attempt to terminate Apple's rights under the
4	Qualcomm license agreement was ineffective, Motorola will continue to wrongfully threaten to
5	assert its patents against Apple's iPhone 4S, the new iPad, and other Apple products, and thereby
6	cause Apple irreparable harm and injury. The object of this litigation—Apple's ability to
7	continue selling the iPhone 4S, the new iPad, and other Apple products worldwide—exceeds
8	$75,000 in value to Apple.
9	70. Motorola was not entitled to terminate Apple's rights
10
11
12	It was Motorola who first sued Apple for patent
13	infringement on October 6, 2010, in the United States District Courts for the District of Delaware
14	and the Southern District of Florida, and in the International Trade Commission.
15
16	Motorola's
17	purported termination of Apple's rights was ineffective.
18	71. This is an exceptional case entitling Apple to an award of its attorney's fees
19	incurred in connection with this action pursuant to 35 U.S.C. § 285.
20	COUNT THREE
21
22	(DECLARATORY JUDGMENT THAT THE QUALCOMM-MOTOROLA LICENSE AGREEMENT SHIELDS APPLE IN ANY LAWSUIT FROM LIABILITY FOR INFRINGEMENT OF THE '898 PATENT BY THE IPHONE 4S'
23	72. Apple incorporates paragraphs 1-71 as if fully set forth herein.
24	73. An actual and justiciable controversy exists between Apple and Motorola with
25	respect to whether the Qualcomm-Motorola license agreement shields Apple in any lawsuit from
26	liability for infringement of the '898 patent by the iPhone 4S. This is based, inter alia, on (1)
27	Motorola's ineffective attempt to terminate Apple's right to use Qualcomm components;
28

Case 3:12-cv-00355-GPC-BLM Document 69 Filed 08/03/12 Page 19 of 23

(2) Motorola's statements in German proceedings regarding the European counterpart to the '898 patent that "[t]here is no strategy in place not to challenge [the iPhone 4S]. The fact that the Plaintiff has not yet challenged the 4S in Wisconsin has tactical reasons of a procedural nature, which the Plaintiff naturally will not expose to the Defendant."; and (3) Motorola's refusal to stipulate that it will not sue Apple for infringement based on Apple's use of the Qualcomm components outside of Germany. While Motorola agreed not to accuse the iPhone 4S of infringement in the litigation in Wisconsin (case no. 3:10-cv-662, which was transferred to the Northern District of Illinois, case no. 1:11-cv-08540), its statement in Germany nonetheless makes clear that it is Motorola's intent to assert claims against the iPhone 4S in future litigation in the United States. While Apple will vigorously contend that Motorola cannot now assert such claims, based on the '898 patent or otherwise, given its conduct in the Wisconsin/Illinois action and the Court's ruling in that case, Motorola's clear threat of future litigation creates a case or controversy.
74. Absent a declaration that the Qualcomm-Motorola license agreement shields
Apple in any lawsuit from liability for infringement of the '898 patent by the iPhone 4S, Motorola will continue to wrongfully threaten to assert its patents against Apple's iPhone 4S and thereby cause Apple irreparable harm and injury. The object of this litigation—Apple's ability to continue selling the iPhone 4S worldwide—exceeds $75,000 in value to Apple.
75.

19	75.
20
21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28

1	76. This is an exceptional case entitling Apple to an award of its attorney's fees
2	incurred in connection with this action pursuant to 35 U.S.C. § 285.
3	COUNT FOUR
4	(DECLARATORY JUDGMENT THAT THE QUALCOMM-MOTOROLA LICENSE AGREEMENT SHIELDS APPLE IN ANY LAWSUIT FROM
5	LIABILITY FOR INFRINGEMENT OF
6	BASED ON APPLE'S USE OF THE MDM6610 BASEBAND PROCESSOR)
7	77. Apple incorporates paragraphs 1-76 as if fully set forth herein.
8	78. An actual and justiciable controversy exists between Apple and Motorola with
9	respect to whether the Qualcomm-Motorola license agreement shields Apple in any lawsuit from
10	liability for infringement of
11	based on Apple's use of the MDM6610 baseband processor
12	. This is based, inter alia, on (1) Motorola's ineffective attempt to
13	terminate Apple's right to use Qualcomm components; (2) Motorola's statements in German
14	proceedings that "[t]here is no strategy in place not to challenge [the iPhone 4S]. The fact that the
15	Plaintiff has not yet challenged the 4S in Wisconsin has tactical reasons of a procedural nature,
16	which the Plaintiff naturally will not expose to the Defendant."; and (3) Motorola's refusal to
17	stipulate that it will not sue Apple for infringement based on Apple's use of the Qualcomm
18	components outside of Germany.
19	79. Absent a declaration that the Qualcomm-Motorola license agreement shields
20	Apple in any lawsuit from liability for infringement of
21	based on Apple's use of the MDM6610
22	baseband processor , Motorola will continue to wrongfully
23	threaten to assert its patents against Apple's iPhone 4S, the new iPad, and other Apple products,
24	and thereby cause Apple irreparable harm and injury. The object of this litigation—Apple's
25	ability to continue selling the iPhone 4S, the new iPad, and other Apple products worldwide—
26	exceeds $75,000 in value to Apple.
27	80.
28

1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8	81. This is an exceptional case entitling Apple to an award of its attorney's fees
9	incurred in connection with this action pursuant to 35 U.S.C. § 285.
10
11	COUNT FIVE (DE CLARATORY JUDGMENT THAT MOTOROLA'S PATENT RIGHTS UN DER 12
13	ARE EXHAUSTED)
4	82. Apple incorporates paragraphs 1-81 as if fully set forth herein.
5	83. An actual and justiciable controversy exists between Apple and Motorola with
6	respect to whether Motorola's patent rights in the MDM6610 Qualcomm chip under
7
8	are exhausted outside of Germany. This is
9	based, inter alia, on (1) Motorola's ineffective attempt to terminate Apple's right to use
20	Qualcomm components; (2) Motorola's statements in German proceedings that "[t]here is no strategy in place not to challenge [the iPhone 4S]. The fact that the Plaintiff has not yet
21	challenged the 4S in Wisconsin has tactical reasons of a procedural nature, which the Plaintiff
22	naturally will not expose to the Defendant."; and (3) Motorola's refusal to commit that it will not
23 24	sue Apple for infringement based on Apple's use of the Qualcomm components outside of
25	Germany.
25 26	84. Absent a declaration that Motorola's patent rights in the MDM6610 Qualcomm chip under
27	are exhausted
28

1	outside of Germany, Motorola will continue to wrongfully threaten actions for infringement
2	against Apple's iPhone 4S, its new iPad, and other Apple products based on the use of the
3	MDM6610 Qualcomm chip, and thereby cause Apple irreparable harm and injury. The object of
4	this litigation—Apple's ability to continue selling the iPhone 4S, the new iPad, and other Apple
5	products worldwide—exceeds $75,000 in value to Apple.
6	85. Motorola's patent rights in the MDM6610 Qualcomm chip under
7
8	are exhausted outside of Germany, and
9	Apple is entitled to a declaration to that effect.
10	86. This is an exceptional case entitling Apple to an award of its attorney's fees
11	incurred in connection with this action pursuant to 35 U.S.C. § 285.
12
13	V. PRAYER FOR RELIEF
14	WHEREFORE, Apple respectfully requests that this Court enter the following relief
15	against Motorola:
16	A. Judgment in favor of Apple and against Motorola;
17	B. A declaratory judgment that Motorola's attempt to terminate Apple's rights and
18	covenants under the Qualcomm-Motorola license was ineffective;
19	C. A declaratory judgment that the Qualcomm-Motorola license agreement shields
20	Apple in any lawsuit from liability for infringement of the '898 patent by the iPhone 4S;
21	D. A declaratory judgment that the Qualcomm-Motorola license agreement shields
22	Apple in any lawsuit from liability for infringement of
23	based on Apple's use of the MDM6610
24	baseband processor ;
25	E. A declaratory judgment that Motorola's patent rights in the Qualcomm MDM6610
26	chip under
27	are exhausted
28	outside of the Federal Republic of Germany;

Case 3:12-cv-00355-GPC-BLM Document 69 Filed 08/03/12 Page 23 of 23

1	F.	Permanent injunctive relief restraining Motorola and its subsidiaries, affiliates,
2	officers, directors, agents, employees, servants, licensors, successors, assigns, and all those actin
3	in concert with them, from prosecuting patent infringement proceedings against Apple based on
4	Apple's use of Qualcomm components licensed under Motorola patents in any forum outside of
5	this Court and outside of the Federal Republic of Germany in violation of the Qualcomm-
6	Motorola license agreement;
7	G.	A judgment awarding Apple all available damages for its anticipatory breach of
8	contract by repudiation claim with the exception of damages for Motorola's breach of contract by
9	virtue of suing Apple in the Federal Republic of Germany;
10	Н.	An order ordering Motorola to specifically perform its contractual covenant not to
11	sue Apple based on Apple's use of Qualcomm components outside of the Federal Republic of
12	Germany in violation of the Qualcomm-Motorola license agreement;
13	I.	An order granting Apple its attorneys' fees and costs;
14	J.	Such further relief as this Court may deem proper in law or equity.
15
16	Data de Assass	at 2, 2012
17	Dated: Augu	Respectfully submitted,
18
19		/s/ Robert D. Fram Robert D. Fram
20		rfram@cov.com COVINGTON & BURLING LLP
21		One Front Street San Francisco, CA 94111-5356
22		Telephone: (415) 591-6000 Facsimile: (415) 591-6091
23		Attorneys for Plaintiffs,
24		APPLE INC. AND APPLE SALES INTERNATIONAL
25
26
27
28	I		